

Join us for the Boiler Rule Workshop on January 8.

EPA's Area Source Boiler Rule Deadlines Are Approaching

Do you have a nongas-fired boiler at your facility that burns biomass, oil or coal? If so, you may be subject to the Area Source Boiler Rule issued by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). There are several approaching deadlines of which you should be aware., with one as early as January 2014.

Attend our half-day workshop to find out how to stay in compliance and avoid fines.

What You Will Learn:

- What is included in the new rule
- Who must comply with these rules
- Important compliance dates
- Compliance requirements—emissions, tune-up and energy assessment
- How to submit paperwork to the EPA
- Who enforces these rules
- FREE assistance is available

Who Should Attend?

- Facility managers responsible for boilers that burn biomass, oil or coal, such as:
 - Schools
 - Government buildings
 - Hospitals
 - Farms
 - Correctional institutions
 - Commercial businesses
 - Coal-related industries
- Environmental consultants

Learn more about who must comply with the new rule at the EPA's website: www.epa.gov/boilercompliance/.
